

Atif Prince

Country: Pakistan

Course: Diploma of Community Welfare

Institute: TAFE NSW – Sydney Institute, St George College

Atif Prince, TAFE NSW – Sydney Institute International Student of the Year 2011 receiving his award from The Hon. Adrian Piccoli, Minister for Education (left) and David Riordan, Sydney Institute Director.

Atif Prince from Pakistan could not be happier about his decision to study community welfare work with TAFE NSW in Australia. He was impressed by the lifestyle and opportunities Australia had to offer and also the comfort of studying in a safe environment.

Atif commenced the Diploma of Community Welfare Work in 2009 at TAFE NSW – Sydney Institute, St George College and went on to win the 2011 Institute International Student of the Year Award.

“Winning this award was a great achievement and I was proud to be recognised for my efforts, hard work and contribution to Australia.”

Atif has graduated with high-level skills to supervise staff and volunteers and design and deliver programs that promote individual and group wellbeing.

“The teachers are amazing and have taught me so much.”

Atif is also grateful for the many friends he made while studying at TAFE NSW.

“Studying at TAFE with students from different backgrounds provided me the opportunity to experience different cultures and make new friends.”

Atif recommends studying in TAFE NSW to any international student.

“You achieve better results at TAFE NSW. There are also better study and learning conditions in a safe, friendly, supportive environment close to the city and transport systems.”

Atif works as a volunteer for a non-profit organisation and is continuing his studies with the Australian Catholic University.

Published: 27 July 2012