

Syed Nazmus Sakib

Country: Bangladesh

Course: Diploma of Community Welfare

Institute: TAFE NSW – South Western Sydney Institute, Campbelltown College

Syed decided to come and study at TAFE NSW for many reasons, saying “I think TAFE NSW is the best choice for me because it is very popular in Australia for their teaching curriculum and their quality of education.” He wanted to study Community Welfare to learn more about other people and cultural groups, as well as the welfare system and community service.

When asked what his thoughts were on studying at TAFE NSW – South Western Sydney Institute at the Campbelltown campus he said, “the campus has a good library and ample collection of books. TAFE NSW also have constant internet access. The teachers are also highly qualified in their field and help you to understand by teaching every topic very clearly.”

Studying in Australia has given Syed the opportunity to meet many new people from a range of countries and backgrounds and he feels that he has made many friends. His most enjoyable aspect of studying here has been that, “all of the teachers are very good and professional in TAFE NSW. There is a good café with good food and the students are also friendly and helpful.”

“I would recommend studying at TAFE NSW to all of my friends and other people because it is one of the best education institutes in Australia,” Syed said.

After Syed has completed his Diploma he hopes he will be able to work in the community welfare industry.

TAFE NSW – South Western Sydney Institute has nine Colleges and Industry Centres of Excellence for Transport, Telecommunications, Engineering, Hospitality, Hairdressing, Building and Construction. The Institute offers over 150 courses to international students across a broad range of industry areas. Graduates of South Western Sydney Institute have a high success rate in gaining admission to higher education and employment.